???? but it is a normal sid, not a real time release one I've heard about that Sid... so... I'm also thinking about trying out the ubuntu beta I mean the server edition I have no idea what a 'real time release' is oh that's right - the cd's are now frozen 'released' I should try that ahh ok sid is super unstable debian stable, ubuntu stable, gentoo stable, fedora stable, arch stable sid seems to be unstable for everyone except for ubuntu developers i see arch can handle it, but they're still a pain to configure, and it requires you to use arch to actually configure it and no, arch is not my distro of choice I've been using it for a few years but it was very rough around the edges I've made do with debian for the past few years until I had my server working properly but I want something new, I've been doing too much porting from the old RHEL 5 machines or maybe a RHEL 7 machine I dunno I just want a stable system and debian is absolutely stable 'sid' is not arch is very stable if I had a choice of working around linux or working around kernel bugs I'd choose kernel bugs, but for the most part I can't do that because I don't know about them and usually kernel bugs suck and linux sucks xD I have a lot of interesting machines in my closet, maybe I'll start using them well actually, I have no idea why they're all closed, so I have no idea why I have a lot of machines in my closet. I could look and see, but really I don't care that much I don't particularly like hardware I wish I had more free
