Removed Direct X Hardware Acceleration. 3 answers tagged with hardwareacceleration fifa 08. 03.10.2011 0:05 Impossible, sadly, but if you were playing on a Windows game with this same behaviour you could try to disable Hardware Acceleration (the only way to handle this issue) by running the game in XP compatibility mode from Windows 7 (see software edition link below and download the game). Also, keep in mind that using an old operating system (such as XP) can have other problems to solve (like low priority of the video card in the computers). For example, using old hardware and software if the game uses a Nvidia-based card (like GTX-950M) the game can have a performance issue. In this case you could try to use a lower resolution (such as 640 x 480 with Low settings) and a smaller image size (between 128x128 and 128x128 with Medium IW). However, you will have a lot of free time and getting this game installed on your windows OS just might be the next thing on your to-do list. ;) By the way, it was hard to find a working link to the game for you to test on. However, I found one and tested it on my PC and it worked fine. If you are still having problems, please let me know how it is going for you.
