Bicycle frames have long been manufactured with a front triangle having a pair of tube ends defining a front wheel axis, and a pair of tube ends defining a seat tube axis. The rear end portion of the frame includes a seat tube having an upper end which is threaded at the lower end thereof to receive the seatpost, and a pair of rear wheel axles which are provided with spindle bearings for supporting the rear wheel hubs. The upper ends of the front and rear wheel axles are rotatably supported on the seat tube rear end portion by a bearing arrangement which includes spaced bearing cups which are secured to the seat tube by laterally spaced screws. The present invention relates to a novel bicycle frame which is of the aforementioned type, but which has a seat tube in which the upper ends of the front and rear wheel axles are also rotatably supported. In the present invention, the bearing assembly is placed between the seat tube and the respective frame tube. It is also known to manufacture bicycle frames in which the rear wheel axle is formed integrally with the frame end portion and a rear wheel is disposed on the axle. An example of this type of construction is shown in U.S. Pat. No. 5,176,434. The present invention provides a similar type

What's New in the?

An entirely free web-based system designed to help people improve their time management, and produce better results in life. Pomodoro Technique has been around for a while but it is still a relatively new method. Francesco Cirillo the creator of Pomodoro Technique explains how to use Pomodoro Technique and what is it's real purpose. How to use Pomodoro Technique: The primary premise is that we can only get to know our lives by living them. You can use a Pomodoro timer as a means of self-observation. When you have reached a certain length of time without thinking about it, it is time to move on to the next task. Pomodoro Technique is based on the facts that you do not need to have long periods of uninterrupted time to get things done, It is possible to get much more out of shorter periods of focused work, than you would get from long periods of unbroken leisure time. However, that time must be reserved for focused and uninterrupted periods of work. How the Pomodoro Technique works: The Pomodoro Technique is about turning time into a precious commodity. It is about working in a very brief, but intense period of time, and then taking a break. A Pomodoro is 25 minutes of work, taken in short, intense bursts. During this time, you will try to complete a single task, (or work on a single goal). At the end of the 25 minutes, you will take a 5 minute break. You will then repeat the process over and over again. It is important to realize that this technique is not about procrastination, or making excuses, or giving up. It is about managing your time in a focused, efficient manner. In fact, the Pomodoro Technique is a useful tool for anyone who is dealing with time management. There is no question that it works, because so many people, who have attempted the technique, have told us that it has made a real difference in their lives. If you choose to try the Pomodoro Technique, you will begin to notice that there is more to your time than you thought. You will begin to see things in a new way, and realize that you have much more control over your time, than you might have thought. How to Use Pomodoro Technique: The most effective way to begin is to find something that is important to you, and start using a simple system. Have a clear-cut objective in mind. Before you can begin to use the Pomodoro Technique, you must first decide what the goal is, and how to achieve it. It is very important to be very specific about your goal
