Toxocara infections can cause serious problems in dogs, especially young and immunosuppressed animals, in whom heavy infections can be fatal. Dogs are often infested with the infective stage of the parasite, the infective L3 (larval) stage. Presentation as a serological test has been sought for a number of years, but with varying results. To produce a reliable assay, a number of different hybridization formats were tested. Those incorporating polystyrene washes gave consistently higher results than those using polypropylene washes. The
