Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a method of isolating a wafer from a package. More particularly, the present invention relates to a method of isolating a wafer from a package by using a stack of MOSFETs on a wafer or a wafer with a limited number of devices so that the wafer can be temporarily isolated from the package. 2. Description of the Prior Art It has been well known to package a wafer into a carrier before bonding the wafer to a lead frame. The wafer is then bonded to the lead frame which is, in turn, sealed. The structure may then be tested on wafer and if not defective, then packaged into a carrier. The carrier is then bonded to a ceramic carrier and the assembly is sliced to separate the carrier from the ceramic carrier. The problem with the above-described method is that it requires a lot of assembly steps for isolating a wafer from a carrier.
