Concentrations of apatite, calcite, goethite, hematite, molybdenum, iron, nickel, phosphate, silica and sulfur were studied in silt and sand cores from 8 freshwater reservoirs in The Netherlands. During sedimentation at 1 to 10 m/day, the mineralogical and chemical components of suspended particulate matter (SPM) in the receiving water will influence the chemistry of the sediments due to hydroxide reactions between the components of SPM and the reservoir water. Water and sediment samples were taken at the top and bottom of each reservoir and analyzed. Four reservoirs showed a generally higher concentration of silt at the bottom than at the top, indicating a higher concentration of water-borne SPM. The concentrations of iron, nickel, phosphate and silica decreased toward the bottom and were higher in the silt fraction. These trends indicate that these minerals were mainly associated with SPM at the bottom of the reservoirs. In contrast, most apatite, calcite, goethite and hematite particles were found at the top and were therefore likely to have originated from the reservoir water. These conclusions were supported by the mineralogical analysis of the sediments. m m o n d i v i s o r o f 1 0 2 4 5 a n d 1 9 0 5 0 . 1 5 W h a t i s t h e g r e a t e s t c o m m o n f a c t o r o f 1 0 0
